Children’s Museum Reaches Milestone of 3,000 Active Member Families

Charleston, SC (August 3, 2016)— The Children’s Museum of the Lowcountry (CML) welcomed its 3,000th member family on Wednesday morning.

In celebration of the milestone, the Thomason family of Isle of Palms was surprised with a paid Family Membership to the Children’s Museum. A Family Membership includes unlimited admission to CML for the children of one household and two named adults for one year, as well as discounts on seasonal camps, birthday parties and events.

"We’re thrilled to announce that we now have 3,000 member families at CML," said Nichole Myles, Executive Director of the Children’s Museum. “We are delighted to welcome the Thomason family to the Children’s Museum and look forward to sparking their imagination and stimulating curiosity through the power of play for them and the thousands of other families in the region we serve.”

The Children’s Museum first opened on September 21, 2003, occupying what was once part of Charleston’s nineteenth-century train station complex, Camden Towers. CML focuses on play-based learning for early childhood (ages Birth – 10) and has received many recognitions, including ‘Best Museum’ from Lowcountry Parent’s Moms Choice Awards for the third year in a row.
